There was also a pronounced tendency to favour Sephardic formulae over the Ashkenazic liturgy that had guided German Jews in prayer for years. In so doing, Geiger sought to give positive expression to the hope that all humanity would one day be united in truth and integrity.

Like his Hamburg counterparts, Geiger attempted to rid his siddurim of passages. In addition, Geiger completely omitted the line, "Restore the sacrificial worship to Your sanctuary, and accept Israel's fire-offerings and their prayer with love and favour" from the first of the final three benedictions of the Amidah. But they were not heeded by their colleagues, who only could see safety in making the religion as easy as the veriest infidel can desire, and rendering our worship as nearly the church as possible; whereas, if they are truly teachers in Israel, they must know that faith without duty is a libel on Judaism, and that the worship of the Synagogue is in its Geiger Meier (German Edition) totally at variance with the church. In the course of our labours for the people, we have, as our readers dwell know, endeavoured to furnish a transcript of the Hebrew to the English; and we were constantly admonished that to give a translation which would be universally acceptable, which would harmonize with all commentators, Geiger Meier (German Edition) which could satisfy ourself, was impossible of attainment.
