It was a beautiful, handmade, ceremonial scimitar with etchings in the blade and a jewel incrustated handle. In addition to books, alumni have published some hundreds of poems, stories, essays, and reviews in prominent and vital venues. Yes, fast, funny, entertaining, interesting. Except this old lady lives in a golden pagoda, rides vultures and has a third eye. The story was interesting, but the constant swearing ruined it for me. But then she meets Remy, a mysterious, sexy witch with power, class, and charm to spare, and everything changes. That she was an obvious illusionist – how else to explain her appearance? Dawn, by S. Jesse is a zombie who actually performs a service for people that being, die for. Like vampires and zombies kind of wrong.
